

Black Politics in New Deal Atlanta: The John Hope Franklin Center for African American History

Black Politics in New Deal Atlanta (The John Hope Franklin Series in African American History and Culture) by Karen Ferguson

★★★★☆ 4.4 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 2217 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Word Wise : Enabled
Print length : 352 pages

FREE

DOWNLOAD E-BOOK

The John Hope Franklin Center for African American History at Georgia State University in Atlanta, Georgia, is a leading research institution dedicated to the study of African American history and culture. The Center's mission is to foster a deeper understanding of the African American experience through scholarship, teaching, and public engagement.

The Center was founded in 1985 by Dr. John Hope Franklin, a renowned historian and civil rights activist. Franklin believed that the study of African American history was essential for understanding the American experience as a whole. The Center's mission is to continue Franklin's legacy by promoting research, teaching, and public engagement that illuminates the African American experience.

The Center's research program focuses on a wide range of topics, including the African American Diaspora, the Civil Rights Movement, and the history of race and racism in the United States. The Center's faculty and staff are leading scholars in their fields, and their research has made a significant contribution to our understanding of African American history.

The Center's teaching program offers a variety of courses on African American history and culture. These courses are taught by the Center's faculty and staff, as well as by visiting scholars. The Center also offers a graduate certificate in African American Studies.

The Center's public engagement program provides a variety of opportunities for the community to learn about African American history and culture. The Center hosts lectures, workshops, and exhibitions throughout the year. The Center also has a strong outreach program that works with schools and community organizations to promote the study of African American history.

The John Hope Franklin Center for African American History is a vital resource for the study of African American history and culture. The Center's research, teaching, and public engagement programs make a significant contribution to our understanding of the African American experience.

Black Politics in New Deal Atlanta

The New Deal was a series of economic and social programs enacted by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in response to the Great Depression. The New Deal had a significant impact on the lives of African Americans in Atlanta. The federal government provided jobs and benefits to African Americans, and the New Deal helped to improve the city's infrastructure and economy.

African Americans in Atlanta were active in the New Deal coalition. They supported Roosevelt's policies and worked to ensure that African Americans benefited from the New Deal programs. African American leaders in Atlanta, such as John Hope Franklin and W.E.B. Du Bois, played a key role in shaping the city's response to the New Deal.

The New Deal had a mixed impact on African Americans in Atlanta. While the federal government provided jobs and benefits to African Americans, the New Deal also reinforced the city's racial segregation. African Americans were still denied access to many public facilities and businesses, and they continued to face discrimination in employment and housing.

Despite the challenges, the New Deal helped to improve the lives of African Americans in Atlanta. The federal government's programs provided much-needed assistance to African Americans during the Great Depression. The New Deal also helped to raise awareness of the plight of African Americans and to lay the foundation for the Civil Rights Movement.

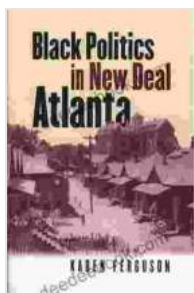

The John Hope Franklin Center for African American History and Black Politics in New Deal Atlanta

The John Hope Franklin Center for African American History is committed to studying the history of African Americans in Atlanta, including their role in the New Deal. The Center's research, teaching, and public engagement programs help to illuminate the African American experience in Atlanta and to promote a better understanding of the city's history.

The Center's research program has produced a number of important studies on Black politics in New Deal Atlanta. These studies have helped to shed light on the challenges and opportunities that African Americans faced during this period. The Center's teaching program offers a variety of courses on Black politics in New Deal Atlanta. These courses are taught by the Center's faculty and staff, as well as by visiting scholars.

The Center's public engagement program provides a variety of opportunities for the community to learn about Black politics in New Deal Atlanta. The Center hosts lectures, workshops, and exhibitions throughout the year. The Center also has a strong outreach program that works with schools and community organizations to promote the study of African American history.

The John Hope Franklin Center for African American History is a vital resource for the study of Black politics in New Deal Atlanta. The Center's research, teaching, and public engagement programs help to illuminate the African American experience in Atlanta and to promote a better understanding of the city's history.

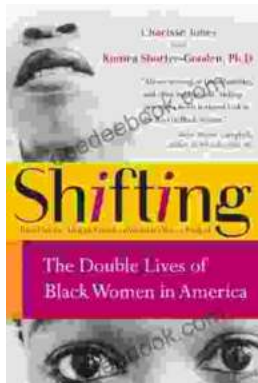

Black Politics in New Deal Atlanta (The John Hope Franklin Series in African American History and Culture) by Karen Ferguson

★★★★☆ 4.4 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 2217 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Word Wise : Enabled
Print length : 352 pages

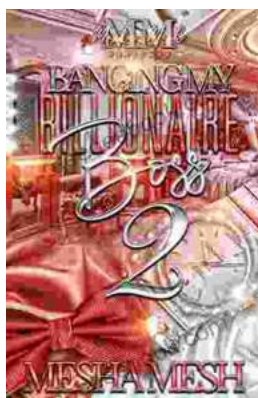

FREE

DOWNLOAD E-BOOK

The Double Lives of Black Women in America: Navigating the Intersections of Race, Gender, and Class

Black women in America lead complex and multifaceted lives, juggling multiple roles and identities while navigating the often-intersecting challenges...

Banging My Billionaire Boss: A Love Story for the Ages (or at Least the Next Few Hours)

Chapter 1: The Interview I was nervous. Really nervous. I mean, I was about to interview for my dream job, the one that I had been working towards for years. I had...