The Inspiration Behind Dirty Painted Panties

Reid's artistic journey began in 2008 after a profound personal experience. Struggling with depression and low self-esteem, she discovered a hidden pile of her old underwear in her closet.

Dirty Painted Panties are more than just paintings; they are intricate narratives woven onto fabric. Reid's choice of medium is intentional and symbolic, embodying the intimate connection between art and the human body.

The worn and stained nature of the underwear serves as a poignant reminder of the passage of time, lived experiences, and the complexities of personal identity. By preserving these intimate objects through art, Reid invites viewers to contemplate their own relationships with their bodies, their histories, and their innermost selves.
