Head lice are not dangerous, but they can be a nuisance. They can cause itching and irritation, and they can lead to secondary infections if the scalp is scratched.

How To Detect Head Lice

The best way to detect head lice is to check the scalp for lice or nits. Nits are the eggs of head lice. They are small, white, and oval-shaped. They are often attached to the hair shaft close to the scalp.

To check for head lice, use a fine-toothed comb to comb through the hair from the roots to the ends. Pay special attention to the areas behind the ears and at the nape of the neck. If you see any lice or nits, you will need to treat the infestation.

How To Get Rid Of Head Lice

There are a number of different ways to get rid of head lice. The most common treatment is over-the-counter lice shampoo. These shampoos contain insecticides that kill lice and nits.

To use lice shampoo, follow the instructions on the package. Be sure to apply the shampoo to all of the hair, from the roots to the ends. Leave the shampoo in for the recommended amount of time, then rinse it out with warm water.

After using lice shampoo, it is important to comb through the hair with a fine-toothed comb to remove any remaining lice or nits. You should also check the hair for lice and nits every day for the next week to make sure that the infestation is gone.

If over-the-counter lice shampoo does not work, you may need to see a doctor for prescription medication. Prescription medications are more effective than over-the-counter lice shampoos, but they can also have more side effects.

How To Prevent Head Lice

The best way to prevent head lice is to avoid close contact with infested people. You should also avoid sharing personal items, such as hats or brushes.

If you do come into contact with someone who has head lice, you should check your hair for lice and nits as soon as possible. If you find any lice or nits, you should treat the infestation immediately.

Head Lice In Schools

Head lice are common in schools. This is because children are in close contact with each other and they often share personal items.

If your child has head lice, it is important to notify the school nurse. The school nurse can help to check other children for lice and nits and can provide information on how to prevent the spread of head lice.
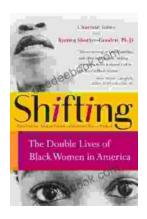

Head Lice:

Head lice are a common problem, but they can be easily treated. By following the tips in this article, you can help to prevent and treat head lice infestations.
