Getting There

The most common way to get to Uzbekistan is by plane. There are direct flights to Tashkent from major cities in Europe, Asia, and the Middle East. You can also fly to Samarkand or Bukhara, but there are fewer direct flights to these cities. Once you arrive in Uzbekistan, you can get around by train, bus, or car. The train is the most comfortable and reliable way to travel, but it can be slow. The bus is a more affordable option, but it can be crowded and uncomfortable. Renting a car is the most convenient way to get around, but it can be expensive. Overall, the best way to get around Uzbekistan depends on your budget and travel style.

Where to Stay

There are a variety of accommodation options available in Uzbekistan, from budget-friendly hostels to luxury hotels. In Tashkent, we recommend the Hotel Uzbekistan or the Wyndham Tashkent. In Samarkand, we recommend the Registan Plaza Hotel or the Hotel Grand Samarkand. In Bukhara, we recommend the Hotel Lyabi Hauz or the Hotel Saman. These are just a few of the many great accommodation options available in Uzbekistan. When choosing a hotel, be sure to consider your budget, travel style, and location preferences.

What to See and Do

Uzbekistan is a country with a rich history and culture. There are many things to see and do in Uzbekistan, including:

- Visit the ancient cities of Tashkent, Samarkand, and Bukhara.
- Explore the Silk Road and learn about its history.
- Visit the Chor Minor Madrasah in Bukhara.
- Hike in the Tien Shan Mountains.
- Visit the Aral Sea.
